Could I vote for a candidate who had failed to vote in the last 20 years? Jerry Brown had ideas that were ahead of his times then that are now becoming the norm like recycling and renewable energy. He had appointed more minorities like no other governor during his time and he is not afraid to postulate his ideas as a public servant. Despite being out spent considerably in this forthcoming November elections, he is running break even with that billionaire opponent. Frankly, I like his chances.
